

About the CSEG...

The Canadian Society of Exploration Geophysicists (CSEG) was formed in 1949 as a society that unites the many people that form the diverse world of geophysics. CSEG membership is comprised of field operations personnel, data processors, interpreters, technical support staff, data managers, consultants, students, academics, data brokers and other individuals and corporations who have a genuine and continuing interest in the natural resources industries.

The objective of the CSEG is to promote the science of geophysics, especially as it applies to exploration, and to promote fellowship, cooperation and education amongst its members. Through the many annual activities sponsored and organized by the CSEG and its volunteer committees, members have the opportunity to attend courses and seminars, exchange technical information at monthly luncheons, enjoy social interaction with other members at a variety of activities including the annual golf tournament, curling bonspiel, family ski weekend, and education week as well as the yearly convention.

The RECORDER is the official publication of the CSEG and is issued 10 times a year to its 2000 active members. The society hosts an informative website – www.cseg.ca – that outlines many of the events, services and resources offered. Education being priority, the CSEG also distributes grant monies to deserving students across the country through a Scholarship fund.

The CSEG welcomes and encourages additional membership from those interested in the science of geophysics.
